It has been a matter of the greatest joy to me and consolation, in the face of many difficulties, to find that the student world throughout India has a warm corner for me in their hearts. The students have lightened my burden to a very great extent. But I cannot suppress from me the feeling that in spite of this personal affection that the students have shown to me everywhere and even identification with the poorest of the land, the students yet to cover a vast amount of ground. For they are the hope of the future. They will be called upon, when they are discharged from their colleges and schools, to enter upon public life to lead the poor people of this country. I would therefore like the students, to have a sense of responsibility and show it in much more tangible manner. It is a remarkable fact and a regrettable fact that in the case of the vast majority of students, whilst they entertain noble impulses during their student days, these disappear when they finish their studies. The vast majority of them look out for loaves and fishes. Surely, there is something wrong in this. There is one reason which is obvious. Every educationist, everyone who has had everything to do with the students, has realized that our education system is faulty. It does not correspond to the requirements of the country, certainly not to the requirements of pauper India. There is no correspondence between the education that is given and the home life and the village life.

- (1) According to Gandhiji students are the _____ of the future.
- (2) Why are the students called upon after their schools and colleges ?
- (3) What are a remarkable as well as a regrettable fact in the case of the majority of the students ?
- (4) Why is our education system faulty ?
- (5) There is no _____ between the education and the home life and the village life.

VIII. Prepare a summary of the following passage bringing out the least four important points. Suggest a suitable title to the summary : 5

Whales are the largest animals in the sea. The largest animals on land are the elephants. But compared to a whale, it would be like a cat but for its shape. Whales are huge and heavy giants. The largest whale is the blue whale which grows about a hundred feet long. Some of them weigh more than a hundred and twenty tons. While the normal weight of an elephant is not more than seven tons. A whale eats two or three tons of food at a single meal.

If whales eat so many tons of food at each meal, you may wonder how there are any fish left in the sea for us to catch. But the oceans are vast and not all whales eat so much fish. The Blue Whale lives wholly on Plankton. A stretch of Plankton, you know, is spread over miles and miles of sea water. Smaller than the Blue Whale in size is the sperm whale. It grows to a length of sixty feet.
