Is there a central theme in Tagore's works? There is a central theme and that is his love for freedom and non conformity which is evident in his works. Apart from being a literary genius, have you even wondered what else did he love? Have you ever thought of tasting the bard's favourite dishes?

Now Kolkata can boast of a Cafeteria - cum - restaurant, 'Cafe The', where people can get a taste of Tagore's culinary indulgences - all under one roof. It was conceived by Ratikanta Basu, who undertook a lot of research to make it a reality. The restaurant is located on H Chi Min Sarani in south kolkata and is the first cafe - cum - restaurant in India that is exclusively dedicated to Tagore cuisine. Tagore would encourage the 'Thakurs' (Cooks) in his ancestral place in the northern part of the city to introduce variations in the platter, by including local versions of continental and peshawari cuisine. Thus the crossover culture ensconced silently in the kitchens of Thakurbari was launched, much before the clamour for cross - cultural cuisine actually started.

The poet's innate wanderlust took him to places like Italy, Spain, England, Turkey and he imbibed the food traditions of respective countries, Since he was exposed to both oriental and continental cuisine, a penchant to blend the two forms came naturally.

There are not many documents to support that Tagore was a die - hard food lover. But he actually was one, and whenever he attended a lunch or dinner abroad he used to collect and bring back the menu cards.

A part of the menu card would be a facsimile of the menu laid out for the dinner party hosted by Indian Society, London in 1912 to felicitate Tagore on the occasion of the publication of Gitanjali, a collection of his poems. Even the decor of the cafe in south kolkata has been designed to suit the ambience with large portraits of Tagore at various lunch and dinner parties across the world, his framed write - ups on food, of course softly played Tagore's songs.

Humour is making fun with friends, relatives and colleagues. It is found that no other animals but the man in the animal kingdom have the faculty and boon of humour. It is totally exclusive to man. This faculty of laughter belongs to man only, for he can speak.

Humour is the means of expressing the mind in a fine sentiment. It also relieves a man suffering from frustration, tension, heaviness, monotony and boredom by creating a congenial, light, friendly and jovial atmosphere. A moment of humour is like a drought of cool and a fragrant breeze in hot summer. God has bestowed man with this quality as the best medicine. People who possess this unique sense of humour can survive long; enjoy a healthy and meaningful life. Truly speaking, they are far better equipped to face the challenges, strains, worries and anxieties of practical life. To laugh and make other people laugh is a fine charity. A man with rich heart and fine sentiment can do this. Hence, only the humourists can become dear and popular with people.

Humour is an essential element of success. Abraham Lincoln, the former president of America said, "with fearful strain upon me night and day if I did not laugh, I should die." Laughter is both medicine and tonic.
